Our future should be important to us

Every student always wants to work more with computers, tablets or other technological devices. Technology affects our daily lives so much, but why not our school life?

We can't do anything about it – technology affects us and our lives: We mainly communicate via WhatsApp, Snapchat, Instagram, Facebook & Co., we don't buy newspapers and magazines anymore but follow the news on the internet, we don't go outside to see how warm it is but ask our mobile phones, etc. In today's world, we do so much by using mobile phones, computers or similar devices.

It is said that school prepares us for adult life, but how is that supposed to work if students don't even learn how to handle modern technology and digital media? Where else should you learn how to prepare a lecture or a presentation on the computer, if not at school?

However, you don't have to turn the entire school system upside down and change everything. You could perhaps start by getting rid of coursebooks and just use tablets with the schoolbooks stored on them. That way, natural resources would be saved and students wouldn't have to carry so many books with them.

Think about it: Wouldn't you find it interesting to learn from the beginning how to handle modern technology and digital media?
